

Regina

Forty short years have passed since the day
Your presence first graced this big earth
Since the year of '70, on June twenty-fifth
The world's not been the same since your birth

Sixteen years later, you had a great summer-
You met the true love of your life
Little did you know that in only four years
Your step-brother would make you his wife

On June 23, marriage license unsigned,
You drove to your wedding's finale
Now some people probably think you were wed
At Centennial Lanes Bowling Alley

Remember the fire ants that got in your clothes
While picking tomatoes with Muffin?
He said he'd 'get nekid' when he saw you disrobe
Somehow I don't think he was bluffin'

Then God gave you children, two of His best
They helped make your family complete
Phillip and Sara are lucky to have
The best mom one ever could meet

You like eating out and exploring new houses
It's been said a good nap makes you chipper
Once you were Biscuit, but now you are Yummy
And your Muffin now calls you his stripper

Your husband adores you, you're his best friend
He says he'd be lost without you
You have inspired him to be all he can be
He loves every last thing about you

Your passion is Jesus, you live by His Word
When you're smiling your eyes sparkle blue
Your family and friends have gathered today
To wish happy birthday to you

Today is day one of the rest of your life
The good times so far have been nifty
To create more memories, you've plenty of time
We'll write some more lines when you're fifty!
